FUN TO LEARN

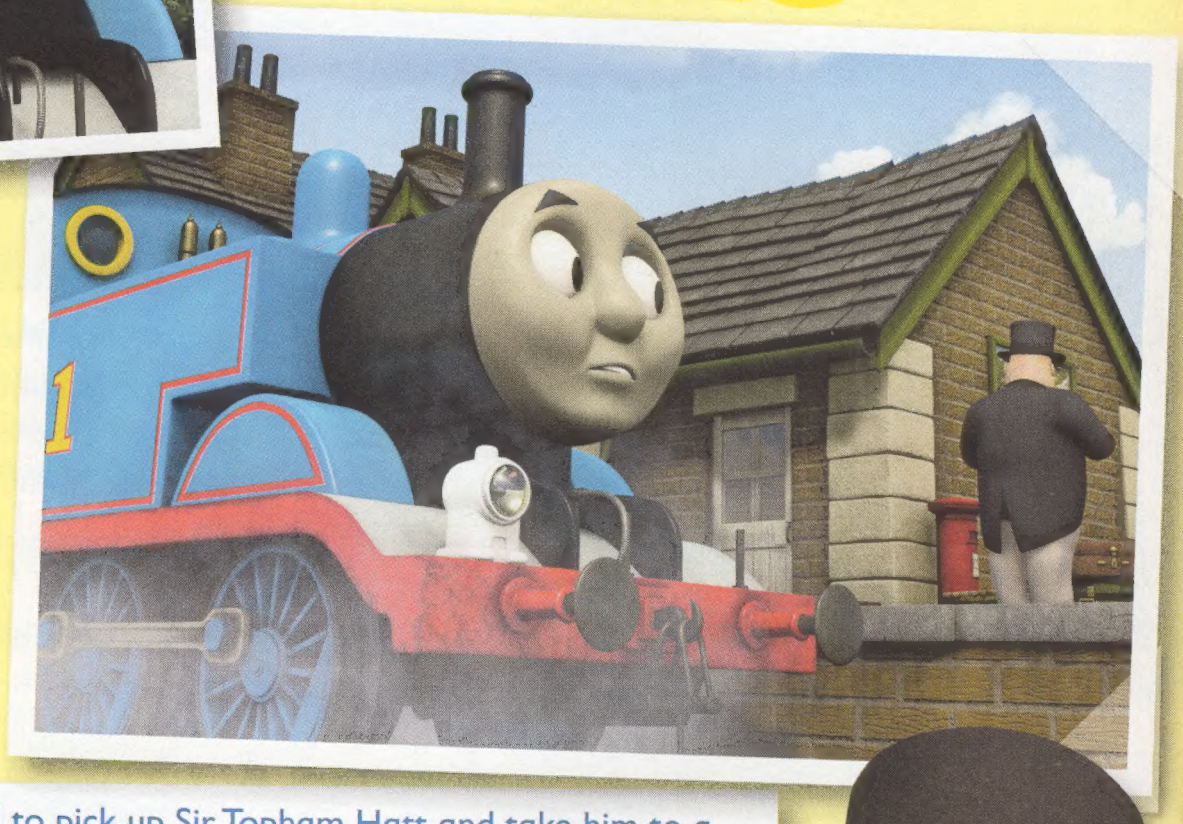
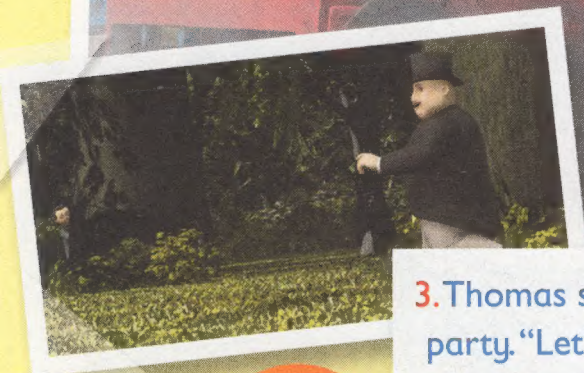
Double Trouble

TRACKSIDE TALE



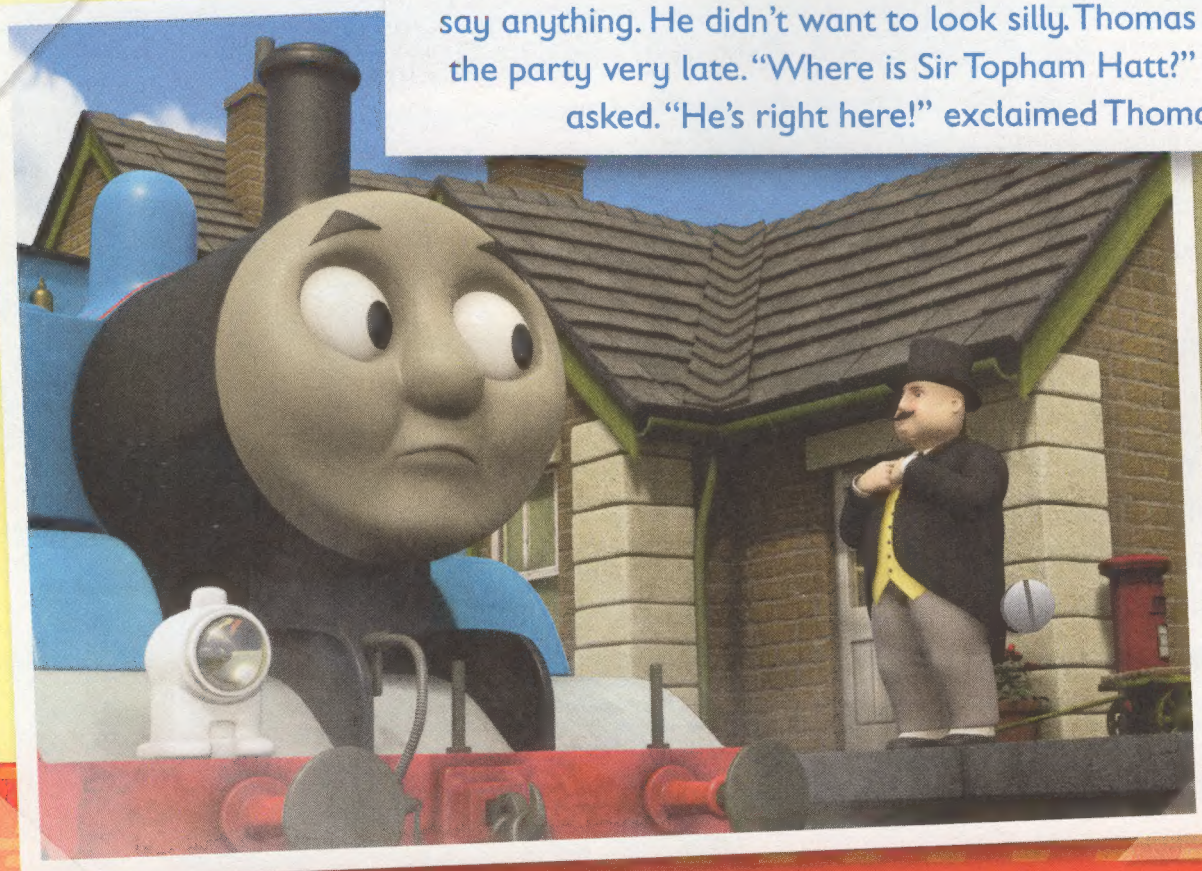
1. Thomas had to pick up Sir Topham Hatt and take him to a holiday party, but he was late! Thomas quickly pulled into the station, where Sir Topham Hatt was waiting. "Sorry I'm late, Sir," he puffed.

2. When Sir Topham Hatt turned around, he had a mustache! "Hello, my good friend!" he chuckled loudly. "How strange," thought Thomas. He was puzzled, but Thomas didn't say anything. He did not want to seem silly!

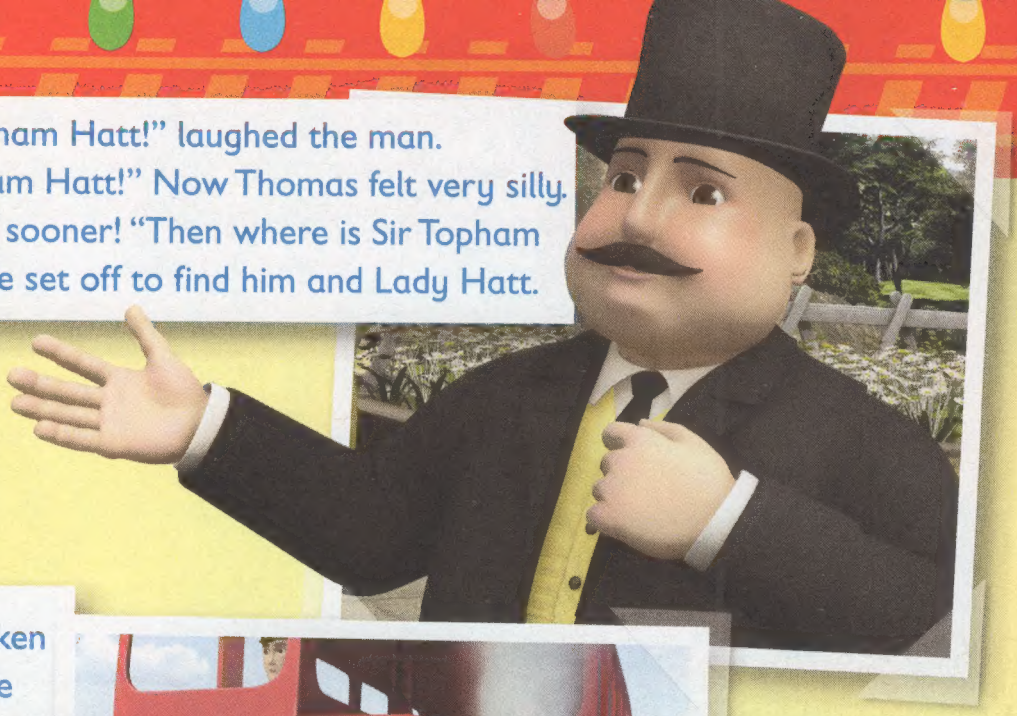


3. Thomas soon met Edward, who had taken some children to the party. "Let's play hide and seek!" cried Sir Topham Hatt, jumping off Annie. "Don't you think Sir Topham Hatt is acting differently? Is that... a mustache?" asked Thomas.

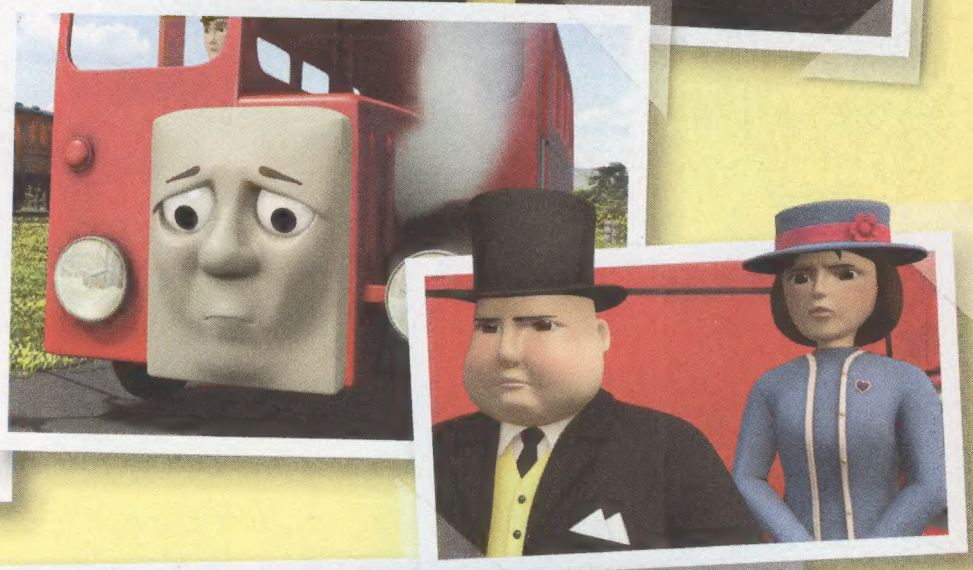
4. Sir Topham Hatt climbed back aboard Annie. Thomas didn't say anything. He didn't want to look silly. Thomas arrived at the party very late. "Where is Sir Topham Hatt?" everyone asked. "He's right here!" exclaimed Thomas.

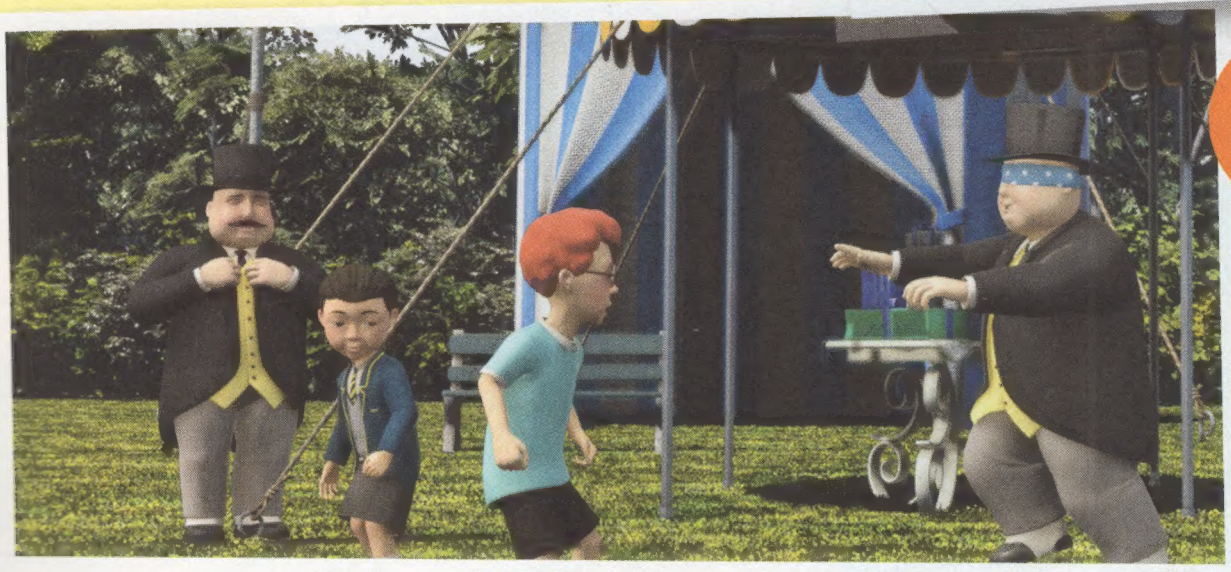


5. "I'm not Sir Topham Hatt!" laughed the man. "I'm his brother, Sir Lowham Hatt!" Now Thomas felt very silly. He wished he had asked sooner! "Then where is Sir Topham Hatt?" asked Thomas. He set off to find him and Lady Hatt.



6. Sir Topham Hatt had taken Bertie instead, but Bertie had broken down. Thomas soon found them. Sir Topham Hatt and Lady Hatt were upset. Thomas apologized for his mistake and raced them back to the party. But Edward told him it had already started!





7. Sir Topham Hatt cheered up once he arrived. Everyone played festive party games and Sir Topham Hatt had so much fun, he laughed even louder than his brother. Seeing everyone laughing made Thomas happiest of all!

SIR TOPHAM HATT'S

Trackside

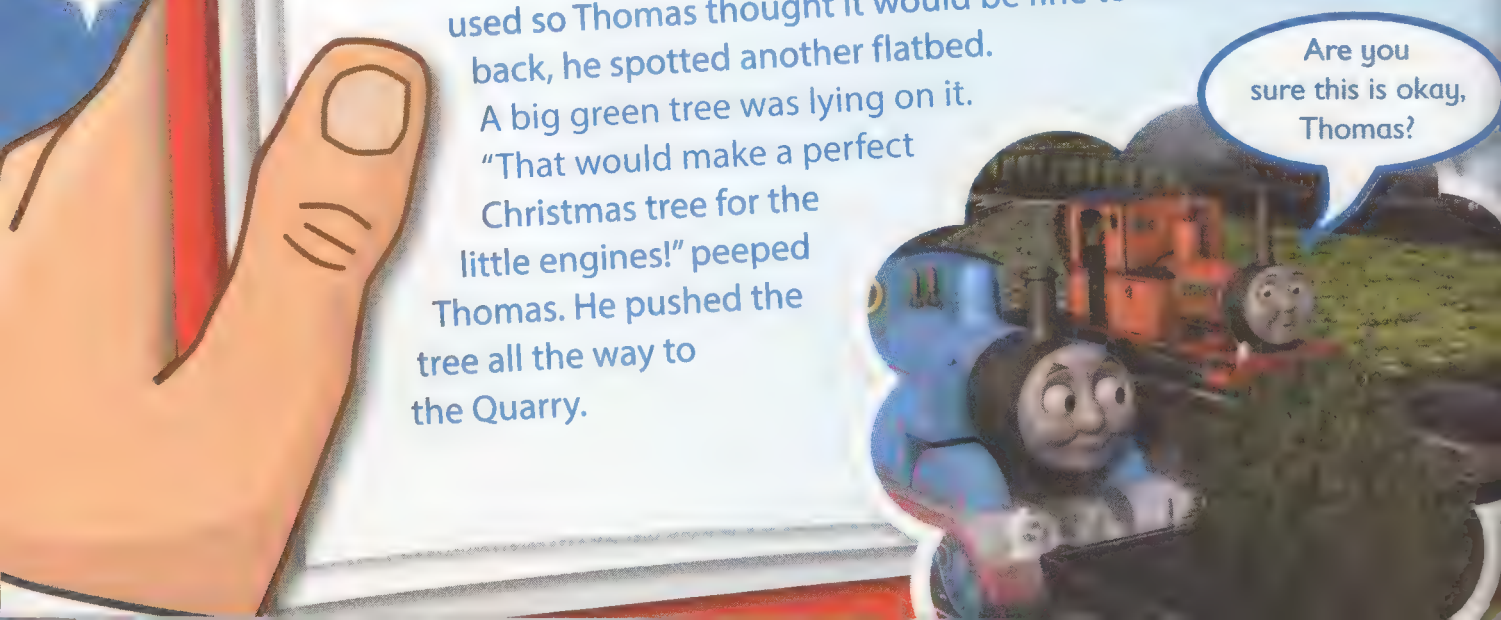
Once upon a time on Sodor...

Thomas and Percy couldn't wait for the annual holiday celebrations in Tidmouth. "It's a shame the little engines won't be there, too," said Percy. "The narrow gauge track doesn't go that far."

Thomas puffed off to work. He couldn't stop thinking about the little engines. Everyone else got to join in the celebrations. Why couldn't they enjoy them, too?

The next day, Thomas saw a flatbed all on its own. It was loaded with boxes of colorful festive lights. "Those lights would really brighten up the Blue Mountain Quarry!" he thought. The flatbed wasn't being used so Thomas thought it would be fine to take it. On the way back, he spotted another flatbed. A big green tree was lying on it.

"That would make a perfect Christmas tree for the little engines!" peeped Thomas. He pushed the tree all the way to the Quarry.



Tale

A holiday story just for you!

Rheneas was working there. He was very pleased to have such a beautiful tree! "Are you sure it's okay to have this tree?" he asked.
"It's all right, I found the flatbed left all on its own. No one was using it," Thomas assured him.

Thomas puffed back to Knapford Station, happy that he had done a good deed. When he arrived, Sir Topham Hatt was there. He looked very worried. "Thomas! Have you seen a large tree and some festive lights? We need them for the celebrations in Tidmouth tonight!" he cried.

Thomas had to admit he had taken them. He felt terrible! "I didn't realize they were needed, Sir. I just wanted the little engines to have a celebration, too!" he wheeshed sadly. Thomas puffed to the Quarry as fast as he could and returned the two flatbeds.

Sir Topham Hatt was waiting. "You were being very kind, Thomas, but you must always ask permission before taking things that don't belong to you," he said. He looked at the boxes of colorful lights. "I suppose I could spare a box of lights or two," he decided.

Later that night, when everyone was at Tidmouth, Thomas was puffing to the Blue Mountain Quarry. All the little engines were there when he arrived. Thomas was covered in bright lights. "Happy holidays, little engines!" he peeped proudly. They were so glad to be part of the celebrations!

Happy Holidays, Little Engineers!
